Dear Sir;

As regards Mrs Dr Huss's efficiency as an oculist, I beg leave to say — that some time in 1883 I think it was, (but am not certain as to the exact date) she was under treatment for her eyes and it was some weeks before she was able to go to the adjusting table. In the mean time she reported for duty each day, with the exception of seven days which she asked permission to be absent.

After that time she was sick so frequently, that I thought it best to let her work only every other week. I found half of that time she was not able to work. Her countenance showed plainly she was suffering. I found her work wrong very often, and reweighed her money a great deal. Had occasion to take it back so often, that I lost confidence in her as a reliable adjuster. Not from lack of interest on her part, but that she did not see, or that she was suffering in body or mind, and could not concentrate her thoughts on her work. When you asked me to report those whom I thought least efficient, I placed her on conscientiously without regard to favor. I will do Mrs Dr. Glass the justice to say she was very respectful, and her deportment was always correct.

Dear Sir:

As regards Mrs. DeHass's efficiency as an adjuster, I beg leave to say – that same time in 1883 I think it was, (but am not certain as to the exact date) she was under treatment for her eyes, and it was some weeks before she was able to go to the adjusting table. In the mean time she reported for duty each day, with the exception of seven days which she asked permission to be absent.

After that time she was sick so frequently, that I thought it best to let her work only every other week. I found half of that time she was not able to work. Her countenance showed plainly she was suffering.

I found her work wrong very often, and reweighed her money a great deal. Had occasion to take it back so often, that I lost confidence in her as a reliable adjuster. Not from lack of interest on her part, but that she did not see, in short she was suffering in body or mind, and could not concentrate her thoughts on her work. When you asked me to report those whom I thought least efficient, I placed her in that list, because I made it out conscientiously without regard to favor. I will do Mrs. DeHass the justice to say she was very respectful, and her deportment was always correct.

Very Respectfully,
